The development of this project didn't go quite as planned, as I had proscastinated it for too long, and didn't get quite as much done as I had hoped for, but I still think the project turned out okay, and that I have learned a lot from it. I had a lot of problems with RabbitMQ, because firstly, I downloaded it in the wrong place, and would have to go into my system's environment variable to change its path. Thereafter, I also had some problems with the queue, because they were full, I thought that my code was wrong, and spent way too much time trying to change it, while I simply just had to delete the existing queues. I also started making an eureka service, but I didn't have any use for it, so It just kinda stayed there with no purpose.